

Foreword and Supplement to “Adam Smith’s Library: General Check-List and Index”

To dwell in Adam Smith’s thought one places him in history and streams of discourse. We learn a bit about his personage from contemporary memoirs and accounts, his personal communications from his correspondence, and his influences from the allusions and references in his work.

Also useful is the catalogue of his personal library. He did not much write inside the books he owned (Phillipson et al. 2019; Simpson 1979, 191), but Smith scholars use the listing of his personal library in interpreting his thought. The cataloguing of books belonging to Adam Smith has been the work of numerous scholars, the two chief figures being James Bonar (1852–1941) and Hiroshi Mizuta, who in September 2019 reached the age of 100 years.

To aid scholarship, we here reproduce the checklist created by Mizuta (1967). We gratefully acknowledge the permission of both Professor Mizuta and the Royal Economic Society, which holds copyright.

The 1967 checklist has been bettered, notably by Mizuta’s own complete account represented by Mizuta (2000). That work, however, does not lend itself to a handy checklist to be reproduced online.

When Mizuta made the 1967 checklist, those of Smith’s books held by the University of Edinburgh had not all been recognized as such. When a librarian has a volume in hand, nearly the only way to determine that it had been in Smith’s library is by the presence of his bookplate, shown below. It is thought that Smith had the bookplate affixed to almost all of his books. In years subsequent to 1967, librarians in Edinburgh gained a complete record of books bearing the bookplate (Simpson 1979). Edinburgh now has a complete listing of its Smith books in an Excel file online (link).

We have checked every item listed in that Excel file to see whether it is included in Mizuta's 1967 checklist. Here we provide as an appendix a 113-row listing to supplement that checklist. Scholars using the resources provided here therefore should check this single PDF file, containing both the reproduction of Mizuta's 1967 checklist and the supplemental list.³ If a work is not listed in either of the two resources contained in the present PDF file, the scholar should feel quite sure that if Smith did ever own a copy the work, no one of this realm does or ever shall know that to have been the case.

The checklist is a facsimile reproduction of pages 65–153 of Mizuta (1967), which present what is effectively one large table. We have suppressed the original running headers and page numbers. The only other changes we have made to the facsimile reproduction is that we have changed the labels on columns 2, 3, 4, and 5 of Mizuta's table. The table has five columns:

Column 1: Author. The items are listed in alphabetical order by “Author.” Mizuta (1967, xv) explains: “The name of the author, where known, is given in the first column; where the author's name is not known the entry is under a significant word from the title; in cases of doubtful or disputed authorship, cross references

3. Mizuta (2000) could serve as a substitute for using our two resources, but it is extremely expensive and likely not to be found in one's nearby libraries.

Column 2: Item Title. The term “item” has three sorts of incarnations: First, simply a single-volume standalone work; second, a pamphlet that is bound in a volume along with other items, each of which will have a separate item entry in the checklist; third, a multi-volume set listed as one item (thus many an item title is simply “Works”, “Oeuvres,” or “Opera”). About this column in the checklist Mizuta writes simply: “In the second column a short title is given.” So the checklist along with the supplemental Edinburgh list that we provide aid the scholar not by providing details about a particular item known to have been owned by Smith, but simply by providing a handy source for determining whether it was owned by Smith. If the scholar has determined that the item was owned by Smith, for details she could then go to any of the three more detailed sources that that item is listed in, which are: Bonar (1932); Mizuta’s Supplement to Bonar’s Catalogue (Mizuta 1967, 1–64); and Mizuta (2000). Incidentally, scholars should realize that Mizuta (2000) not only subsumes Bonar (1932) and Mizuta (1967) but also provides something that they do not: In Mizuta (2000) the user can find “quotations from Smith’s works where the book or author is mentioned by Smith himself,” “quotations from the book in question where Smith and his works are mentioned,” and “if it seems desirable, a short note on the author or the book” (Mizuta 2000, xxiii). Mizuta (2000), then, is not only a catalogue of Smith’s library, it is also a sort of indexing of the relevance of those works to Smith’s works.⁴

Column 3: Page in Bonar 1932. If the item is included in Bonar (1932), the column tells the page of that listing in Bonar.

Column 4: Sheet in 1781 Cat. The words “1781 Cat.” refer to a manuscript catalogue that presumably Smith himself had created in 1781, a catalogue of the inventory of his library. The 1781 catalogue is the second major way of establishing that a book was in Smith’s library (the other being the discovery of Smith’s bookplate within a book). As of 1932, the catalogue was held in Japan. Bonar knew of its existence but it was unavailable to him, and so books listed there but not known by Bonar to have been in Smith’s library are not included in his 1932 listing.⁵ The catalogue is the source for a majority of the items added by Mizuta (1967) to what had already been listed in Bonar (1932).⁶

Column 5: Page in Mizuta 1967 Supp. This column gives the page to the first part of Mizuta (1967), i.e., pages 1–64, which is the detailed listing of items

4. A larger survey of Smith’s library is currently underway by an international group of Smith scholars who are attempting to list and identify the marginalia present in the books. For their initial findings see Phillipson et al. 2019.

5. Bonar (1932, 214) notes his awareness of the 1781 catalogue (he dates it “1761” because of a miscommunication).

6. The 1781 catalogue is published in Yanaihara 1951, 73–126, see also the remarks about it at vii.

supplemental to Bonar (1932).

It is our hope that the PDF file provided here will make intelligence of whether an item was owned by Smith—to use an expression from his lectures—“more comeatible.”

Appendix: Items held by the University of Edinburgh not clearly included in Mizuta's 1967 checklist

Below is a listing of Smith-owned items now held by the University of Edinburgh library that are not clearly in the Mizuta 1967 checklist. It has been constructed as follows: Working from the Excel file in which the library lists all its Smith items (link) we checked, item by item, to see whether the item is listed in Mizuta's 1967 checklist. If listed there, we do not include it in this supplement.

It might be that an item listed below is represented in Mizuta 1967, but in a way that left us uncertain about it being the same item. Sometimes our two sources attributed different authorship or some other variation. In such cases, however, when we concluded that the item is in Mizuta's checklist, we do not duplicate the item with the Edinburgh-attributed information.

When listing an item in the supplement below, we have, generally speaking, directly reproduced Edinburgh's text. We have in some instances inserted notes pertaining to the item as it is represented in either Simpson (1979) or Mizuta (2000), and some multi-volume works are represented here with a single row whereas Edinburgh represented each volume in its own row.

The very concept of ‘included in Mizuta's 1967 checklist’ is itself sometimes a bit ambiguous, for some of Mizuta's entries say “[With 6 others]” or similar; see, for example, the entries attributed to “Parlement.” Here we do not reproduce a number of French-language entries in the Excel file that involve the words “Parlement,” “roi,” “roy,” “royale,” “remontrances,” “assemblée,” and “très-humbles.”

How to use this PDF file: To check to see whether an item was owned by Adam Smith, attempt various searches on this entire PDF: a first search might be on the author's name, but also attempt searches using words from the title or even just a part of word (to surmount problems posed by line-breaking hyphens and diacritical marks). If the item is not found in this PDF file—that is, neither in this supplemental appendix nor in the Mizuta 1967 checklist—the one further step one might take is to check Mizuta (2000). We have not checked Mizuta (2000) against our supplement here—doing so would be complicated because Mizuta (2000) often unpacks sets of papers into multiple items that were listed as a single entity in the previous listings. But it is our understanding that very few bookplated volumes, aside from those in the Edinburgh listing covered here, have been discovered since the production of Mizuta (1967).

Adam Smith's Library: General Check-List and Index

Hiroshi Mizuta¹

[Editors' note: The following text is Mizuta's own guide to the columns of the checklist (Mizuta 1967, xv), slightly edited. In our Foreword above we provide more extensive guidance on using the checklist and on the meaning of the columns.]

The Check-list gives the authors and short titles of all the books known to have belonged to Adam Smith. In the Check-list the following principles for recording books have been adopted:

- (i) The name of the author, where known, is given in the first column; where the author's name is not known the entry is under a significant word from the title; in cases of doubtful or disputed authorship, cross references are given.
- (ii) In the second column a short title is given.
- (iii) In the last three columns page references are given as follows:
 - (a) to the relevant pages in Bonar's Catalogue (2nd ed., 1932);
 - (b) to the sheet-number of the Manuscript Catalogue of Adam Smith's Library made for him in 1781; this has been printed in A Full and Detailed Catalogue of Books Which Belonged to Adam Smith, by Tadao Yanaihara, Tokyo, 1951 (the sheet-numbers are indicated in the margin of Yanaihara's edition);
 - (c) to the pages of [the first part of Mizuta (1967), his "Supplement."].

About the Author

Hiroshi Mizuta is a leading scholar of the history of European social thought. He holds degrees from Tokyo University (BCom, 1941), University of Glasgow, and Kyoto University (Ph.D. in economics, 1960). He taught at Nagoya University 1949–1983, Meijo University 1983–1994, and since 1998 has been emeritus professor at Nagoya University. He took up the work started by James Bonar of cataloguing Adam Smith's library. In 1967 he published Adam Smith's Library: A Supplement to Bonar's Catalogue with a Checklist of the Whole Library, the checklist being reproduced here by permission (and supplemented here with a list of once-elusive titles). In 2000, Professor Mizuta published Adam Smith's Library: A Catalogue (Oxford University Press).
